Invitational Leadership Institute

with the Chippewa River Writing Project

We invite you to join us this fall for a virtual invitational institute!

In the tradition of the National Writing Project's mantra, "Teachers Teaching Teachers," we welcome 12 educators to learn from each other through collaboration, renewing our practices as teachers of writing, adapting those practices for remote learning, and demonstrating our lessons for one another. Participants will work both synchronously and asynchronously for approximately 9-12 hours per month (beginning Saturday, September 25).

Each participant will create and present a teaching demonstration for the cohort and, optionally, for a larger audience during one of the CRWP's virtual events this year. Together, we'll engage in the NWP social practices of writing, learning, and leading.

Participants who successfully complete all components of the Invitational Leadership Institute will become CRWP teacher-consultants and will earn the NWP Teacher-Consultant microcredential/digital badge for engaging in the six social practices for NWP leadership development. Register at chippewariverwp.org/leadership.

36 SCECHs will be available as part of registration costs (pending MDE approval).

The institute can also be taken for 3 graduate credits. The total cost for CMU's graduate application and the three credits will be $1425 plus a $50 application fee. For participants interested in joining the institute as graduate students, please do NOT complete the form below. Instead, contact Dr. Troy Hicks.

Registration Costs and Guidelines:

- Registration cost, before September 10: $225 (reflects a 10% discount)
- Registration cost, after September 10: $250
- Registration closes at 11:59 PM EST on September 19.
- Cancellations before September 19th at 11:59 PM EST will be refunded, minus a $25 processing fee.
- After September 19th, registrations are transferable, but not refundable.
